Papers Relative to the Proposed Union of British Columbia and Vancouver Island. The Governor yesterday laid before the House copies of all papers relative to the Union of these Colonies that have passed between the Colonial Office and Governors Douglas, Kennedy and Seymour. To the despatches from the Duke of Newcastle to Governor Douglas, it is unnecessary to more than allude-they having been already published here. In the first despatch from Mr Cardwell to Governor Kennedy, regret is express ed at the refusal of the Assembly to accept the Civil List, and the Governors of the two Colonies are instructed to ascertain the feelings of the people as to Union. On March 21, 1865, Governor Kennedy sends a despatch to Mr Cardwell detailing the circumstances attending the passage by the House of the unconditional Union resolutions. He says that it having been claimed that the resolu. tions did not fairly represent public opinion, an election was held and Messrs McClure and DeCosmos, advocates of the measure, returned by large majorities. The position of the Logislative Council-in declining to consider the question-the protest of Hons. Rhodes and Finlayson against the non-committal policy of the Council, and the newspaper reports of the debates, are stated in this despatch. Next comes a despatch from Governor Kennedy enclosing a copy of the endeavors to bring about Union, while Gov-Chamber of Commerce petition praying for Union, for the preservation of the Free Port, and for the abrogation of the hostile Customs Act of British Columbia. On the same date (March 21) Governor Kennedy urges the nes cessity of uniting the Colonies on a uniform basis; the abrogation of the an officer less susceptible to such influences; Free Port is recommended, and the proposal of Governor Douglas to have one Governor for the two Colonies, and allow each Colony "a separate Legislature, to make its own laws, raise and apply its own revenue, as at present, for its individual benefit," is thought to be "fraught with the elements of dissolution and discord.' The next despatch that we come to is one from Governor Seymour, contradicting most of the statements contained in the petition of the Victoria Chamber of Commerce, of a copy of which he had "become accidentally possessed." HisExcellency disputes the safety of Victoria harbour, and says that in entering that harbour on a dark night in a vessel (the little elephant, Leviathan) drawing three feet six inches, he went aground. Governor Seymour does not, however, tell Mr Cardwell, that if he had attempted to cross from the Surrey to the Middlesex side of the Thames in the same manner that he tried to enter Victoria harbour, he would have struck on the opposite bank and goue aground there as well! The despatch then goes on to speak of the excellence of the entrance to Fraser River and cites the instance of H. M. S. Tribune having to form an exclusive Reform league have soon anabled to reach New Westminster without accident; but the disaster to the Tribune as she was leaving the river is rather gingerly handled, and attributed to the "dull white colour of the pole that marks the channel." What the "dull white colour of the pole" had to do with the vessel going ashore in broad daylight it is hard to say. The cause of the depression at New Westminster is attributed to the unequal system of government that prevailed prior to his (Gov. S.'s) arrival in the Colony; the merchants of Victoria are taken to task for "engrossing the whole traffic of British Columbia." Not one word is said of the liberality of these very merchants to the merchants of the sister Colony or of their heavy losses in consequence, and the fact that they furnished the "sinews of 31st ult. there were 62 cases and 26 deaths war" with which to build the roads, open the mines, aye, and even pay the Governor his enormous and unreasonable salary of $20,000, is carefully excluded from Mr Cardwell. On March 29, 1865, Governor Seymour writes that the Vancouverians want to be annexed and that the British Columbians are "strongly opposed to the proposed connexion." The people of an alleged libelous article in regard to the Victoria are accused of trying to burning of the United States Court building, create a feeling of dissatisfaction in which it is intimated that the fire was the among the mining population, and of 300 names attached to a petition for Union, "there are but three that would carry weight at Cariboo." On A despatch from Governor Kennedy, dated December 16, 1865, enclosing the resolutions of the Assembly (which body had then repented of the unconditional clause) asking for Union "with the mode and amount of taxation" left for the people to decide, and asking for Responsible Government," is next produced. In a long dispatch from Governor Seymour to Mr Cardwell, written from Rue de la Paix, Paris, and dated February 17, 1866, the Victoria merchants are handled "without gloves" for their interference in the affairs of the sister Colony; the Cariboo Sentinel is denounced as the representative in Cari boo of Victoria (a libel by an opposition sheet which Governor Seymour should have had better taste than to reiterate;) in the face of the numerous and almost daily bankruptcies, Governor Seymour assures Mr Cardwell that "British Columbia is flourishing," and, as proof thereof, a list of the publie works completed in 1865 (with Victoria capital, be it borne in mind) is sketched out. His Excellency then lays down a form of government, by which he proposes to give Vancouver Island four popular members, divided as follows: Victoria, 2; Nanaimo, 1; and Comox, 1. British Columbia is to furnish 8 popular members, and the remaining ten members are to be Government officers or appointees. The port of Victoria is de-nounced as "not in the direct line of commerce," and the assertion is made that no vessels except those specially bound there ever enter it. Nevertheless, His Excellency does admit that " Victoria is the largest city and the most agreeable place of residence," but he thinks that " in seeking Union with British Columbia, Vancouver Island relinquishes all claim to the possession within her limits of the seat of Government." (A melancholy fact.) A despatch from Mr Birch, enclosing a petition for Union from "445 persons," completes the list. It is evident from the meagre extracts that we have quoted, that Governor Kennedy has used his best ernor Seymour has left no stone unturned to belittle us in the eyes of the Colonial Office and give us a bill that he knew we would lay down our lives rather than accept. The plain truth is this: Governor Seymour is not in favor of the Union of the Colonies, and has thoroughly inductrinated Mr Cardwell with his views. The Derby Ministry may give us but whether the Colonies be united or not, nothing will excuse the position assumed by the gubernatorial "delegate" of British Columbia to Downing Street. He has not sim ply opposed Union, but he has also opposed Annexation, and favored the adoption of a
